Malaysia Mini-Case Study:
The Malaysian Access Forum as an Initiative in Self-Regulation and Consensus Building

I. Introduction

Located in South East Asia, Malaysia has a population of about 24 million and GDP of about RM 360,000 billion (US$1.00 = RM 3.8). Its cellular subscribers amount to about 10 million, an approximate penetration rate of 40%. Fixed line penetration is lower, at about 19%, with a total of about 4.6 million lines. With five fixed line operators and eight mobile operators (many expect the market to consolidate), the market is led by mobile provider Maxis and fixed line operator Telekom Malaysia Berhad.

In 1998, as a consequence of a comprehensive review process undertaken by the Malaysian Government, a far-reaching new legal framework focused on the convergence of the telecommunications, media, and information sectors was put in place in Malaysia following the enactment of the Communications and Multimedia Act 1998 (CMA). A separate law created the new Malaysian Communications and Multimedia Commission (MCMC) which began operation in November 1998 with the appointment of a Chairman and two other members of the MCMC. The new Acts were based on principles of transparency and clarity, and on less rather than more regulation.

The regulatory regime is characterized by its focus on transparency, technological neutrality, self-regulation, universal service and its pro-competition approach. The MCMC’s technologically neutral approach licenses four main service markets: network facilities, network services, application services and content service providers.

The new regime introduced with the 1998 Act established an access regime, as opposed to an interconnection regime.1 The access regime seeks to ensure that all network facilities providers (NFP), network service providers (NSP) and applications service providers (ASP) can gain access to the necessary facilities and services on reasonable terms and conditions in order to prevent the inhibition of the provision of downstream services. Section 6 of the Act defines “Access” as access to a network facility and/or network service listed in an “Access List.” The Access List is a list of facilities and/or services determined by the MCMC as essential to the provision of network services and application services. The facilities and/or services which are on the Access List are subject to “Standard Access Obligations.”

The concept of industry self-regulation was also an important part of the overall approach in the CMA and the Act creating the MCMC. In this vein, the Malaysian Access Forum Berhad (MAF)2 was designated in March 2003 of as the “Access Forum”—ie. the industry forum for access issues under the CMA. The MAF is an innovative initiative to develop a new mechanism for consensus building and self regulation – with interesting implications for other countries. While independent from the MCMC (as explained below) the MAF was recognized in the legislation as having an important role in developing an “Access Code”, although the Access Code would have to meet certain legislative criteria. The Access Code is a voluntary industry code with model terms

1 As a comparison, the European Union (EU) concept of interconnection means “the physical and logical linking of public electronic communications networks used by the same or a different undertaking in order to allow the users of one undertaking to communicate with the users of the same or another undertaking, or to access services provided by another undertaking. Services may be provided by the parties involved or other parties who have access to the network.” The EU concept of access means “the making available of facilities/and or services, to another undertaking, under defined conditions, on either an exclusive or non-exclusive basis, for the purpose of providing electronic communications services.”

and conditions for the provision of access to facilities and/or services in the Access List by an “access provider” to an “access seeker”.

The MAF may recommend to the MCMC the facilities and services that should be included in the Access List, as well as an Access Code, and the MCMC is encouraged to defer to such proposals. Thus while self-regulation involves considerable involvement from market participants, it is subject to regulatory oversight or standards in various ways.

The MAF, which is a consultative body and was incorporated as a corporate entity separate from the MCMC, is not entirely unprecedented in that it has some important similarities with the Australian Telecommunications Access Forum, a self-regulatory body that encourages consensus building and private dispute resolution in Australia. Although the MAF is independent of the MCMC, it is the MCMC that has the final responsibility for dealing with interconnection policy and regulatory issues. However, the care and attention with which the new entity has been documented is likely to mean that the MAF will warrant very careful scrutiny by regulators in many emerging markets. This mini-case study discusses some of its basic features.

II. MAF and its Objectives

The Malaysian Access Forum Berhad was incorporated as a company limited by guarantee on April 17, 2001 with its registered office in Kuala Lumpur. The first subscribing members to the Memorandum and Articles of Association were incumbent fixed line operator Telekom Malaysia Berhad and Maxis Broadband Sdn Bhd, an affiliate of Malaysia’s leading mobile operator. At the end of August 2003, the MAF had eight members from various parts of the industry.

Under the CMA, the primary functions of the MAF are:

- to make recommendations to the MCMC to include or remove facilities and/or services from the Access List; and
- to develop and recommend to the MCMC the Access Code.

Among the key objects of the MAF as provided in its Memorandum and Articles of Association are:

- to develop, formulate and recommend the Access List and the Access Codes to the MCMC for determination, including revising, modifying and updating the Access List and Access Codes from time to time and to seek the registration of the Access List and Access Codes with the Commission;
- to promote (on its own initiative or through third parties) research and to conduct research on matters or issues relating to access and interconnection issues arising in the communications and multimedia industries;
- to establish and maintain flexible and transparent organizational arrangements to deal with the national and international aspects of interconnection and access issues;
- to facilitate the development and growth of the Malaysian communications and multimedia industry by encouraging industry self-regulation and ensure effective coordination with government and non-governmental entities concerned with access and interconnection issues; and
- to support the national policy objectives set out in the CMA in undertaking its activities.
III. The Access Framework under the Communications and Multimedia Act 1998

(a) Access List

In March 2001, under Section 55 of the CMA, MCMC published a report on Access List Determination summarizing the network services and facilities included in the Access List, along with its justifications for its approach. Sections 4 and 5 of the report outlined the network services or network facilities involved, utilizing the then existing interconnection and access regime as the starting point. The facilities and services included in the existing Access List are set forth in Annex 1 hereto. The MCMC decided to take an incremental approach that would build on past and existing policies. The MCMC decided that it would then examine if, on a cost-benefit analysis, there is an economic case for expanding the Access List to include other network facilities or network services. Following the issuance of the aforementioned report, the Access List Determination was issued by the Commission and came into effect on April 1, 2001.

(b) Access Code/Mandatory Standard on Access

Under the CMA, the MCMC may determine a mandatory standard on access if it is subject to a Direction by the Minister that requires it to do so. Such a Direction was received by the Commission. Consequently, in April 2003, the MCMC commenced a public inquiry on the matter with the release of a consultation paper on the Draft Mandatory Standard on Access (the Standard). In July 2003 the MCMC published a Report on a Public Inquiry under Section 65 of the Communications and Multimedia Act 1998 of Mandatory Standard on Access.3 Subsequently, in August 2003, the MCMC issued the Commission Determination on the Mandatory Standard on Access, Determination No. 2 of 14 August 2003.4 The Standard is intended to be an interim measure pending development of an Access Code by MAFB and registration of the same by MCMC. This is captured in the Standard whereby it outlines some of the circumstances under which the Standard may be reviewed by the MCMC. Specifically, it may warrant a review “where an industry forum submits a new voluntary code to replace an existing one for that industry.” (Standard 6.5.3(f))

(c) Access Disputes

Appendix A to the Standard sets forth the dispute resolution procedure, which, consistent with the Malaysian approach explored in this mini-case study, emphasizes the responsibility of operators and service providers, including making them responsible for the costs of the arbitration. Indeed, the arbitrator of the dispute may determine not to decide the dispute if the arbitrator considers that the dispute is trivial, frivolous or a vexatious case and may award costs against a party that has brought such disputes—thus discouraging abuse of the procedure. (Standard, Annexure A, section 2.7 and 2.8)

The procedures also encourage negotiation between the parties through the establishment of working groups between the disputants before resorting to the procedure. (Standard, Annexure A, section 3) The procedures require an escalation process whereby failure to resolve the issue at the working group level is then referred to an interconnection steering group comprised of an equal number of representatives from each party to the dispute. (Standard, Annexure A, section 4) Only thereafter, the parties may refer the matter to a technical expert, who need not be a Malaysian citizen, chosen by the parties (or failing which the MCMC), or to the MCMC for “final arbitration”. (Standard, Annexure A, section 5) The procedure excludes court proceedings while the dispute resolution procedures are in force. (Standard Annexure A, section 2.1) Billing disputes are dealt with separately.

IV. Key Aspects of the Malaysian Access Forum

The MAF provides useful insights into the key constituent elements of an industry-oriented consultative body. The following discussion summarizes a few of the key elements of the Memorandum of Association and Articles of Association of the MAF, attached on Annexes 2 and 3 of this case study.

(a) Overview

As a corporation without share capital, the MAF is structured around its members, who are representative of four categories of entities licensed or exempt from license as (1) network facilities provider, (2) network service provider, (3) applications service provider, or (4) content application service provider under the Communications and Multimedia Act.

The members of the MAF elect a Board of Directors which is broadly representative of the different categories of membership, as well as a Chairman. The Chairman, who may be a member but shall not be a Director on the Board, must have relevant industry experience but is neither eligible to vote on the Board nor has a casting vote. The Board may appoint a Chief Executive Officer who is responsible for developing a working plan for the MAF and for overseeing the activities of the MAF.

(b) Committees

The work of the MAF will primarily be undertaken by three standing Access Forum Committees comprising the Network Facilities and Network Service Access Forum Committee (NFNSC), the Applications Service Access Forum Committee (ASC), and the Content Applications Service Access Forum Committee (CASC). The NFNSC is currently regarded as one Access Forum Committee but may be split into two distinct Access Forum Committees at a later date by the Board. The Board or the Access Forum Committee may appoint from time to time Working Committees to address issues on a project-by-project basis.

(c) Governance Principles and Practices

MAF is carefully structured to operate on the basis of the principles of consensus and unanimity. Its constituent documentation provides an interesting template for the formal codification of such principles. Though a detailed understanding of these provisions requires analysis beyond the scope of this brief summary and review of the actual documentation, a few key points might be highlighted.

For example, Article 101 of the Articles of Association, which are attached hereto as Annex 2, provides that where one Access Forum Committee reaches a consensus on any matter pertaining to the Access List or Access Code, those matters shall also be referred to the other Access Forum Committees. Only when all the Access Forum Committees have reached consensus is the matter referred to the Board. Article 105 actually defines the meaning of consensus for purposes of Article 101 in the following way:

“Consensus” is established when those participating in the consideration of the subject at hand have reached substantial agreement (which is defined to be more than 67%) and it requires that all views and objections be considered, and that a concerted effort be made toward their resolution.

5 At the time this report was prepared, the Director of the Board had been appointed by incumbent Telekom Malaysia.
Under some circumstances, consensus is achieved “when the minority no longer wishes to articulate its objection and no major interest maintains a negative stand.”

Once an issue reaches the Board, other safeguards protect the interests of those with divergent views. Any matter relating to the approval and evaluation of the Access List is considered to be an extraordinary matter under Article 88 of the Articles of Association. In the case of such matters a unanimous vote of all directors is required. A unanimous vote is interestingly defined as one where there is an affirmative vote of more than 90% of the Directors present. Once an extraordinary matter is approved, the views of dissenting director(s) are forwarded to the MCMC.

At the membership level, the Articles require that each member be entitled to one vote and that no resolution may be approved unless approved by an affirmative vote of more than 85% of the total number of votes of the members present and entitled to vote. In the case of “Reserved Matters” including any changes to the Articles relating to voting procedures of the membership or the Board, a vote of more than 90% of members is required.

(d) Operational Concerns

The MAF will evidently substantially depend for its effectiveness both on the time commitments of its members as well as on the efforts of the CEO, the Secretary, and other support staff. The CEO is able to retain outside experts and assistance. However, the scope of the MAF’s budget and resources are determined by membership fees paid. These fees involve an initial subscription fee and annual membership fee, the schedule for which is attached hereto in schedule 1 of Annex 3. Under the Articles of Association, these fees are related to the annual revenues of members.

(e) Relationship with the MCMC

Although the MAF is designated as the Access Forum by the MCMC, the MAF is entirely separate from a legal standpoint from the MCMC. It is not in a formal sense a committee or subdivision of the MCMC. However, by virtue of being the Access Forum, the MAF is authorized under the CMA to make recommendations on matters pertaining to the Access List and Access Code for the MCMC’s consideration.

V. Issues for Discussion Relating to the Future Operations of the MAF

The MAF is still in the initial phase of its evolution as a consensus building and self-regulatory entity within the Malaysian regulatory framework. Its ongoing experience is likely to provide useful guidance for efforts in other countries to develop similar institutional capabilities. Highlighted below are a number of potential areas in which the Malaysian arrangements might further evolve, or issues that might need to be faced in the future.

(a) Organizing Consensus

While geared towards a principle of consensus, the MAF may face challenges due to its structure and procedures, which could offer scope for behaviour obstructive to progress. Although the fact that the MAF has been voluntarily established by its members who participate on a voluntary basis, its ability to function as a constructive player in developing the access and the interconnection regime and implementing its principles will depend largely on cooperative attitudes of the members. These may be sufficiently present in the business culture, but it remains to be seen how the process of reaching consensus will play out as it becomes evident how methodologies for setting interconnection charges could affect the financial operations of the operators.
(b) Relationships with Consumer Bodies

There is no formal representation of consumer groups in the organizational structure of the MAF. Nevertheless, there is a consumer forum that has the same status as the MAF within the overall regulatory purview of the MCMC. The representatives of the consumer forum will be involved in the ongoing activities of the MAF. Ultimately, of course, it will be an obligation of the MCMC to address any consumer-related concerns that might emerge as a result of the operations of the MAF.

(c) Relationships with Competition Authorities

There is presently no specialized competition authority in Malaysia and the MCMC is the only sector regulator which looks into competition issues, doing so under specific competition provisions in the CMA. However, efforts to establish a Competition Authority are currently underway. It is possible that Malaysian officials with responsibility for oversight of competition policy could have a general concern about any institutionalized arrangement for competitors to meet together as a group. Such concerns might be addressed, however, by ensuring the openness and transparency of all activities of the MAF.

(d) Ongoing Relationship with the MCMC

Since the MAF is independent of the MCMC, the MCMC functions as a regulatory safeguard for dealing with regulatory and interconnection policy issues. Having said that, the MCMC has adopted a more open approach in terms of its relationship with a consensus building entity compared with some other independent regulatory bodies that have considered proposals for private consensus-building mechanisms. It does not appear to view the existence of the MAF as involving a delegation of authority. Nor does it appear to regard the MAF as a consultative committee or appendage to its own procedures. The Chairperson of the MCMC observed in a recent discussion that she did not foresee any need to attend or oversee meetings of the MAF or view the entity as subject to direct oversight of the MCMC. However, the MCMC’s reports do refer to the MAF and its activities and take them into account in developing the nation’s access regulatory framework.

The interaction, then, between the MCMC and the MAF will be interesting. How much scope the MAF will have to initiate significant regulatory initiatives will depend upon how strongly the MCMC has already taken the lead. For example, the recent issuance of the detailed Mandatory Standard on Access, intended by the MCMC as an interim measure, will likely have a significant influence in framing the MAF’s activities in developing the Access Code.

(e) Resources

It will be interesting and significant to follow how the MAF develops its own resources and capabilities. The MAF might, for example, find itself in a position to address scenarios in which conflicts emerge among members or categories of members over proposed access arrangements. Under the Articles of Association, the MAF cannot act in response to a significant breakdown of consensus. Informally, of course, there may be ways for agreement and consensus to be developed with or without the intervention of the MCMC. An issue that may need to be addressed in the future is whether the MAF will develop its own resources for mediation or private dispute resolution.
Network Facilities and Network Services in the Access List
(for which licensees are subject to Standard Access Obligations)\(^6\)

The network facilities or network services to be included in the Access List and the rationale for their inclusion are as follows:

(a) Fixed Network Origination Service and Mobile Network Origination Service.

This offering is targeted as the markets for 1800 number, 1300 number and other similar services which require any-to-any connectivity.

(b) Equal Access (Fixed Network) Service

The offering is aimed at markets for domestic long distance and international fixed calls. The MCMC generally accepts that the local loop exhibits strong natural monopoly characteristics.

(c) Fixed Network Termination Service and Mobile Network Termination Service

Fixed network termination services ensure that end users who choose to be directly connected to a given network (fixed or mobile) will continue to enjoy any-to-any connectivity with end users connected to other fixed networks. Similarly, mobile network termination services provide similar assurances that users connected to fixed or mobile networks will be able to have any-to-any connectivity with end-users connected to other mobile networks.

(d) Private circuit completion service

End-to-end private circuits are important for the development of further downstream communications services such as Internet access, private networks and other multimedia applications. Local loop and junction networks are difficult to reproduce on a widespread basis for leased lines because of the high sunk costs involved. The provision of private completion services can be expected to facilitate competition in the market for end-to-end private circuits by enabling competing operators to provide end-to-end private circuits to end users between locations where services are provided by different operators.

(e) Domestic Transmission Service

Although there may be parts of the transmission network which can be, and has been, duplicated, in other parts of the network it is still unfeasible for there to be duplication. The relevant markets for such services include markets for end-to-end local permanent circuits, narrowband digital end-to-end transmission, broadband digital end-to-end transmission, e-business, and dial-up domestic long distance calls.

(f) Interconnect Link Service (Physical Co-location, Virtual Co-location and In-span Interconnection)

Co-location enables potential cost reductions and quality improvements in the provision of interconnection services, including fixed network termination and origination, mobile network termination and origination, equal access and private circuit completion.

(g) Internet Access Origination Service

The Commission has decided to include an Internet Access Call Origination Service in the Access List. If included in the Access List, this service would require a network service provider to originate calls made by end users directly connected to the network of that service provider in order to access the services of Internet access providers. There are only a limited number of Internet access service providers in Malaysia at present. The Commission considers that an origination service for Internet access is unlikely to be provided to Internet access service providers on a competitive basis because the local access network (over which the origination service for Internet access would be provided) exhibits strong bottleneck characteristics. It is not economical for the local access network to be duplicated. Given the Commission's findings that the local access network is not economical to duplicate, it is unlikely that mandating access to an origination service for Internet access would have an adverse effect on optimal investment incentives in the local access network. Furthermore, the Commission expects that the access price would be set at a level which takes into account a reasonable commercial return on investments in the local access network.

(h) Other Services

Apart from the Internet Access Call Origination Service, the MCMC has not formed a view on whether Malaysia's national policy objectives would be promoted or supported if the Access List is expanded to include other services and facilities. The MCMC believes that further consultation through the MAF is required before the Commission is in a position to form a view on the inclusion of other facilities and services. Amongst others, it anticipates holding further consultation on the following matters as regards their inclusion on the Access List:

(i) payphone conveyance service;

(ii) DSL services; and

(iii) unbundled local loop service.
