

Christoph Legutko short CV

Christoph Legutko is responsible for the communication public policy in the German speaking and Central East European countries for the Legal Policy Group of Intel Corporation.

He represents Intel at the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), at the European Conference of Postal and Telecommunications Administrations (CEPT), and at other regulatory and industrial bodies like Digital Europe or Bitkom.

Christoph has joined Intel in 2006.

Before he has hold leading positions in the sales and R&D departments of the computing and telecommunication sectors of Siemens since 1984; in his last six years there he was responsible for radio spectrum policy of the Mobile Sector of Siemens Communications.

He began his professional career in a medium-sized electronic company in Germany where he developed the distance and movement sensors.

Christoph has studied at the Mining and Metallurgical Academy in Krakow, Poland, and received his master's degree in Electronics Engineering in 1981.