2015

THEME 1 – GET AHEAD

Think big, but take concrete first steps. You know the future is yours, but it's the decisions you take now that will shape that future. How do you access the information you need? What talent will be needed in the job market in the upcoming years? Do you have the right skills to stand out from the crowd? Prepare to be challenged, to showcase your ideas, and to work with other young talents from around the world. Prepare for mentorship, for training and guidance. Prepare to hone your skills, and to leverage them in a dynamic and interactive environment. Prepare to get ahead.

BYND 2015 INTER-GENERATIONAL DEBATEBYND
2015BYND 2015 INTER-GENERATIONAL DEBATE

Throughout the world several young social innovators are changing the world for the better through the use of information and communication technologies. Using broadband-enabled applications or even low-end mobile phones, young innovators are transforming key public services expanding access to health, education or government information to millions of people worldwide. What is preventing more widespread innovation by youth? How can these examples of innovation be scaled up? What role can governments, the private sector and international organizations play to support this innovation?

The BYND 2015 inter-generational debate will provide a platform to debate these questions, and to generate a dynamic exchange of views between selected heads of delegation and young innovators on how to leverage the full potential of young people to change the world.

THEME 2 – BE HEALTHYBYND
2015THEME 2 – BE HEALTHY

It's time to get off the sofa, to leave those games consoles behind, and explore the outdoors. It's time to do a little exercise, to better understand your body and enjoy looking after it. It's time to be aware, and to help others understand the risks. It's time to be healthy. Do you actually know what you're eating? What steps can you take to improve your lifestyle? How do we make these appealing and fun, and how can technology help? We're going to help you find out.

THEME 3 – BE SMART, BE SAFEBYND
2015THEME 3 – BE SMART, BE SAFE

Do you know the person chatting to you on the latest viral video thread? How about the guy you bought concert tickets from off eBay? Do they know your full name, your address, or maybe your phone number? This is the kind of information which could be used to track your whereabouts. Every day thousands of people become victims of cybercrime. From money to identity theft, credit card details and intellectual property. The cloud knows more about you than you know about yourself, but who else has access? We want to help you take action, to become informed and teach yourself and others to protect your private and sensitive information: to be smart, be safe.

THEME 4 – RESPECT YOUR ENVIRONMENTBYND
2015THEME 4 – RESPECT YOUR ENVIRONMENT

It took 4 and a half billion years for our planet to evolve the way we know it today, but a few decades of irresponsible human behavior could leave it scarred forever. Our Earth is gradually becoming uninhabitable. From climate change to desertification, from unsustainable depletion of natural resources to chemical pollution; the changes are gradual, and happening at a pace that is not noticeable for many. Is it too late to reverse these changes? The choice is ours.

THEME 5 –CHANGE YOUR WORLDBYND
2015THEME 5 – CHANGE YOUR WORLD

You want to change the world, but where do you start? The world is really big, and there seem to be so many problems. Pick one. Zone in on it, and throw all your energy into fixing it. Technology offers great potential, especially for the global social good. But how do we convert social media into social change? How do we use it for constructive civic engagement? We have some ideas, and they revolve around you. Help us shape the policy framework that will put the next generation of devices and applications into the hands of the next generation of users. To send a message to this world's leadership that information and communication technology is essential for our future growth and development. We need you to help choose our priorities for the future.
