

Access to ITU archival materials

ITU's historic archives are open to the public by appointment with the archivist, and in accordance with the following access conditions:

- records that were created for public dissemination or that were subsequently officially publicly disseminated are open to the public;
- most other files may be consulted after a period of 30 years, measured from the date of the individual document or, in the case of a file, from the date of the most recent document in the file;
- records containing personal data are closed to the public.

For further information on the archives, or to arrange an appointment with the archivist, please contact the Archives Service at ITU headquarters in Geneva:
