

Mr. Gregory DOMOND holds a Bachelor's degree in Electronics Engineering from the Faculty of Applied Science (FDSA) and a Master's degree in Telecommunications (M.Sc) from the University of Coventry, England. He did research in telemedicine at Tokai University, Japan. He completed telecommunications trainings in the United States of America.

He has participated in various conferences, seminars and conferences on telecommunications in Asia and Europe.

He held senior positions at CONATEL (1999 - 2004), Haïtel (mobile operator) (2004 - 2008) and Comcel (mobile operator) (2008 - 2011). He has been teaching telecommunications since 2004 and has been Director of the Department of Electronic Engineering at INUKA University since 2016. Mr. Domond has been a consultant at CONATEL since 2012.

He is currently Vice-Rapporteur for Question 2/2: Telecommunications / ICT for eHealth, Question 7/2: Strategies and policies regarding exposure of humans to electromagnetic fields

Question 6/2: ICTS and the environment of the study groups 2 of the International Telecommunications Union.

He was recruited as Consultant by the ITU for the assessment of telecommunications networks and infrastructures resilience in Haiti, and to manage a connectivity project in rural areas.

He is author of more than 200 articles on ICTs and several books.