

Ms. Nisreen Deeb

Executive Director of the Lebanese League for Women in Business and CoFounder of Girls Got IT, Lebanon

Nisreen Deeb is an IT Consultant, Social Entrepreneur, and the executive director of the Lebanese League for Women in Business. Nisreen is involved in encouraging young women to appreciate STEAM and aspires to global reach through the power of technology, which is perceptible from her winning achievement in 2013 as a one of the top 5 TechWomen emerging leaders in Lebanon and spent five weeks in Silicon Valley. Techwomen experience allowed her to win the US department of states funding for her project which is about teaching programming for grade 4 students. The opportunity that Nisreen had in Silicon Valley encouraged her to come back to her nation and provide an environment for Lebanese students and women to achieve their full potential, and hence Co-Founding Girls Got IT initiative that is about teaching STEM skills to young girls from all areas in Lebanon by engaging the startup companies and the Ecosystem, Founding the Arab Women in Computing Lebanon Chapter, an active member in the LLWB STEM Committee, recently Co-Founding USALTECH (a community for TechWomen and TechGirls in Lebanon), in addition to organizing many hackathons and events in Lebanon. Currently, she is managing an organization that runs multiple projects and activities with internal donors and partners to empower women in Business, women in IT, women entrepreneurs and women from all sectors and all background.

