

Alison Balzer is Foreign Affairs Officer at the U.S. Department of State, specializing in coordinating digital freedom and economy policy across multilateral organizations. She began her career as a U.S. diplomat, serving in Addis Ababa, Moscow, and Vienna (Mission to the OSCE). She focuses on the intersection of behavior, technology, and policy interact to create the forces that shape emerging international policy. Alison lives in Washington, DC, with her husband, two daughters, and three cats.