

DAMARIS MABEYA

Founder & Executive Director, Aminia Dada Innovations

Ms. Damaris Mabeya is the Founder and Executive Director of Aminia Dada Innovations (ADI). This is a Kenyan woman-led organization that works towards the promotion, protection and realisation of inclusive digital rights for all. As the Founder, Ms. Mabeya is the lead in the design, development and implementation of ADI initiatives and interventions.

Aminia Dada Innovations works through a reciprocal model; through leveraging technology as an economic empowerment tool as well as optimizing digital economic empowerment as a means to bridge the gender digital divide.

Damaris has previously worked with the UN Human rights charter bodies and its subsidiaries in promoting women's development through formulating human rights based approaches. She has extensive experiences in substantive research and has been key in the execution of institutional strategies and mechanisms on gender inclusivity in Geneva, Switzerland.

At the International Telecommunications Union and various organizations, Damaris liaises in Study Group submissions and activities. This is part of her work on building partnerships with external institutions through developing policy papers and frameworks. She has developed and implemented regulatory mechanisms on socio-economic tools towards digital inclusivity in developing countries.
