

JOÃO FILIPE ALVES

João Filipe Alves is the Head of Security Unit at National Regulatory Authority for Telecommunications (ANACOM) and Vice-Chairman of the Emergency Communications Planning Committee. Previously, he was Head of the Regulation, Supervision and Certification Department at the National Cybersecurity Centre (CNCS). During the Portuguese Presidency of the Council of the European Union, he was the Chair of the NIS Cooperation Group and the Chair of the CyCLONe Network. He was the national representative in the European Union Cybersecurity Exercises project of the European Union Agency for Cybersecurity (ENISA) since 2010. Earlier in his career, he worked as a Software Engineer at Critical Software, Portugal Telecom and Siemens. He holds a degree in Computer Engineering from the Faculty of Sciences of the University of Lisbon and a postgraduate degree in IT Security Engineering, also from the Faculty of Sciences of the University of Lisbon.