

Andreas Georgakopoulos is currently collaborating with WINGS ICT Solutions as a research engineer. At a European level, he has participated in various international projects for almost five years. His main interests include the specification of cognitive management mechanisms for the creation and maintenance of dynamic access networking paradigms in the Future Internet era, solutions for smart wireless access networks and smart grids. Also he participates in various initiatives and fora such as GreenTouch and the Wireless World Research Forum (WWRF) in the area of Communication Architectures and Technologies.