

Dear ladies,
Dear gentlemen,

Let me express my pleasure to be here, in such an interesting and important conference for us and to greet you all.

All national regulatory bodies are nowadays involved in mapping procedures. Usually the regulators are the bodies with the biggest knowledge about market and significant market players and therefore they are asked by ministries to help with the conditions for the state aid broadband funds.

The independent status of regulatory offices should be the safeguard and guarantee that the mapping and system of quality of service are set properly and in transparent and balanced way. Thus, I consider very important for all stakeholders and especially for regulators to meet and exchange experiences with mapping and QoS tools.

Because the power of the regulators is not only in independence but also that they are not alone.

So, I wish the conference be a next successful step in broadband development in everywhere in Europe.
