

Good Practices in Child Online Protection

16 September 2019 | Warsaw, Poland

This executive workshop is held in the advent of the 13th International Conference "Keeping Children and Young People Safe Online"

Back to back with the 13th International Conference "Keeping Children and Young People Safe Online" and at the kind invitation of the National Research Institute from Poland, NASK, the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) Office for Europe is organizing a half-day workshop on Good Practices in Child Online Protection. The workshop will be held within the framework of the ITU European regional initiative on "Enhancing trust and confidence in the use of ICTs", adopted by WTDC-17 in Buenos Aires.

This executive workshop will be delivering a series of specific presentations on good practices in the field of child online protection in particular in Poland, Germany, United Kingdom and Ukraine. Five sessions followed by brief discussions will be held by various institutions engaging in protecting children online with the aim of illustrating the current status and showcasing the efforts made. Overall, the stocktaking will touch on existing policies, regulations and laws as well as the strategies and initiatives in place in Poland, Germany, and UK to protect children online. In addition, reporting procedures, existing national research centers and current national and international partnerships will be presented.

This workshop has been organized with the aim of strengthening European and international collaboration as well as creating new partnerships in the field of Child Online Protection. To this end, the half-day of meetings will provide a unique opportunity for invited institutions to share their best practices and will take place at NASK, Kolska 12 street, 3rd floor, conference room 311.

The following topics will be addressed:

- Existing strategies
- Existing initiatives (for children, parents, policy makers and industry)
- Existing policies, regulations and laws
- Existing specialized institutions
- Existing reporting procedure
- Existing national research centers and their tasks
- Existing national and international partnership
