

Abstract:

Digicel is an end-to-end digital operator in 30 countries spanning the Caribbean, Central America and South Pacific regions, where it offers mobile and fixed broadband connectivity, telecommunications and television services and a suite of digital services through Mobile Apps including financial services, news, audio-visual content streaming, and messaging. This presentation shares Digicel's perspective on the effect of taxation imbalances and explains why digital taxation proposals must consider the infrastructure and connectivity layer.