

Connected and autonomous vehicles at the crossroad: opportunities and challenges

Presentation Abstract

The prospect of connected and autonomous vehicles (CAVs) running on our streets in the future bring both excitement and anxiety to many people today. This presentation, delivered from a UK automotive industry perspective, sets out some quantified opportunities CAVs may bring, but also tempers these by warning that overcoming four overarching challenges is the key to unlocking these opportunities.