TDG – Training Development Guidelines

Edition 2001

The ITU Training Development Guidelines (TDG) were originally developed within the framework of the interregional United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)/ITU project CODEVTEL (Course Development in the field of Telecommunications).

Since its pilot project beginnings in the 1970s, CODEVTEL has evolved to become an on-going activity of the ITU/Telecommunication Development Bureau (BDT), supported by the regular budget of ITU since the 1982 Plenipotentiary Conference of Nairobi. At any one time, approximately 70 to 80 countries are participating in job-oriented course development, providing courses to be shared by other countries in ITU's International Sharing System (ISS) of Training Materials. The ISS databases of training materials are an important part of the ITU/BDT Information System, and are available in the Virtual Training Center (<http://www.itu.int/VTC>).
