The Virtual Training Center

The ITU Virtual Training Center is a training center offering its services on-line, or in other words a training center on the Information Highway.

This service is developed by ITU in the framework of its activities aimed at fostering the use of information technologies in the telecommunication training sector, mainly in developing countries.

Services offered include distance tutoring and participation in virtual classes, access to information – for example about commercial material and courses available or service provides – access to training material, distance consultancy services, etc.

The ITU Virtual Training Center originated from a world-wide activity called “TeleProject”. It is the pilot activity of the ITU Global Telecommunication University/Global Telecommunication Training Institute – an ITU activity in its early phase of development which will further diversify training opportunities for developing countries implementing modern teaching technologies.
