Connecting all communities
by 2015...

I believe

Harnessing the power of information and communication technologies is one of the leading challenges of our times.

We are going through a historic transformation in the way we learn, work, communicate and do business. New information technologies have enormous potential to help spread knowledge and improve health and education. They have produced the information age. Now it is up to governments, the private sector, civil society and international organizations to build an information society that benefits and empowers all people.

Join world leaders and other key decision-makers in Tunis from 16 to 18 November 2005 for the second phase of the World Summit on the Information Society. Become a partner in connecting the world.

Kofi Annan United Nations Secretary-General ▲

www.itu.int/wsis

world summit
on the information society
Geneva 2003 - Tunis 2005

UNITED NATIONS

International Telecommunication
Union
ITU