

Information and communication with just the touch of a (big) button.

Modern communications underpin almost every aspect of society. They govern how we work, how we socialize and how informed we are. Therefore, people who don't have easy access to the proper technologies are at a considerable disadvantage. At the International Telecommunication Union (ITU), we believe that information and communication technologies should be easy to use. For everybody. Regardless of age, health or physical ability.